A PLAQUE marking the opening of Griffith Central is just one of the features highlighting the history of the site.

Go to town at Griffith Central

THE long-awaited Griffith Central will open its doors at 8am tomorrow.

Griffith Central has been a long time coming and brings with it a flurry of excitement over new stores, greater shopping choices and a week of opening specials, competitions and giveaways.

The centre introduces the region's first full-line Target store and Ritechies Supa IGA Supermarket.

Joining them will be about 25 specialty stores, including many that are new to Griffith, with more stores opening in the coming months.

Griffith Central is also the first local retail centre to offer a fully enclosed undercover carpark facility, with space for 500 vehicles on one level.

Griffith Central centre manager Cheryl Wood is leading the Savills management team for the complex and said tomorrow's opening will be a great step forward for Griffith.

"Griffith Central provides a total shopping experience," she said.

"It's a state-of-the-art retail facility with all the amenities and standards of the larger centres found in metropolitan areas."

The high ceilings, generous layout and stylish fixtures and fittings throughout, as well as the drawcard of retailers new to Griffith like Target and IGA Supermarket, will make Griffith Central a comfortable shopping environment for everyone.

There have been many visual elements incorporated into the centre's design features that reflect the historical significance of the site, including a water feature across the external façade of the building and a plaque highlighting some history of the site.

Accompanying the plaque is a photo taken in 1938 of locals on the pontoon of the reservoir; a further reminder of the historical importance of the site.
